How can I control Gypsy Moth and Emerald Ash Borer?

Ohio State University Extension will host a meeting on August 5 to help landowners and homeowners answer basic questions about two invasive tree insects that have invaded area woodlands and landscapes. Ash trees have been under heavy assault from Emerald Ash Borer throughout Fulton County. Heavy defoliation of trees by Gypsy moth infestations were scattered throughout the county as well in 2008.

Both of these insect will not just disappear in 2009. Landowners and homeowners who have questions about what can be done to control these two pest from now through next year when the adults emerge again will want to attend the program, Answering Control Questions for Gypsy Moth and Emerald Ash Borer to be held on August 5 from 6:30 pm till 8:30 pm in the Robert Fulton Ag Center, 8770 State Route 108, Wauseon.

The first hour will focus in on control options for Gypsy Moth. Spray programs done in the early spring are needed to control this pest. Large acreage may be eligible for cost share spray programs coordinated by ODA. The second hour will focus on the question, "I have an ash tree in my yard that shows no signs of EAB and I really want to protect it, what can I do?"

Amy Stone, Horticulturalist with OSU Extension-Lucas County will be the main speaker. Amy has specialized in Ash Borer and Gypsy Moth educational programs over the past 4-5 years and is very knowledgeable about both insects and control recommendations.

The program is free and open to the public. Anyone with an interest in these two pest are encouraged to attend.
